Most Notable Observations/Patterns

The significant number of students that enter the Kindergarten Center with academic and emotional needs continues to rise each year. These needs raise the level of more instructional planning time and collaboration to support these children.

| Challenges | Discussion Point | Priority for Planning |
|---|---|-----------------------|
| Significantly lower school attendance by the sub group of students with disabilities | Parents of students with disabilities often have high anxiety about the school setting. Also, if the child is expressing those concerns at a young age, they frequently let them stay home. | ~ |
| A significantly higher number of students coming from Early Intervention with academic and behavioral needs. | The level of need continues to rise each year. This may be based on the limited number of resources these students receive based on economic challenges. | • |
| Using systematic, collaborative planning processes to ensure instruction is coordinated, aligned and evidence based | These meetings are not always a priority because the administration frequently needs to react to other pressing concerns. | ✓ |
